Dear Friends

What a summer it has been, the warmest summer on record with four heatwaves recorded and long periods without any rain – definitely one for the record books. And what a summer Colin and I have had - one for our record books!

We set off at the beginning of August in our motorhome to drive through France, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Denmark and Sweden to reach our final goal in Finland of crossing the Arctic Circle. Not for the faint-hearted and just in case we got fed up with each other's company, we took another 19 motorhomes and 36 guests with us. The route was all planned out before we went, with regular stopovers and visits to some amazing towns and cities on the way, aiming for our final destination of Rovaniemi where the Arctic Circle crosses through Santa's Village. Once there, we had a couple of days' rest, a chat with Santa Claus and then it was time to turn round and do it all again in reverse.

Why am I telling you this? Because while we were on our long driving days, we got time to think and reflect. Many of the things we saw on our journey reminded me of this glorious world that God has given us. We drove past huge lakes glistening in the sunshine, went through mile after mile of pine forests with the scent of the pine hanging in the air, we saw reindeer and moose wandering at the roadside and numerous different birds. We drove over tremendous bridges – feats of engineering which allowed people to travel freely from country to country – and we saw church after church after church. In the tiniest village communities, the largest building to be seen was usually the church. All these things reminded me of how good God is to us and how blessed we are.

Our return journey at the start of September coincided with the Global Week of 24/7 Prayer and, as we headed for home, I listened to the daily reflections that Simon posted on Facebook. Each day the prayers focused on different parts of the world where people are persecuted for being Christian and trying to follow our Lord Jesus. The horrors and trials that people in other parts of the world face for their faith are hard to comprehend, and listening each day reminded me how fortunate we are to have the opportunities that we do. We are free to worship when we want, travel where we want, meet friends and family and enjoy the world in which we live with no fear of consequences.

We've had an amazing summer at Baginton Road and beyond, with Holiday Club and Holiday from Home allowing us to express our faith and share it with others. As we move into the Autumn season and all that we have to look forward to, let us all remember to "Give thanks with a grateful heart, Give thanks to the Holy One for all that we are blessed with". *

From the Werretts

(with a little help from AI)

After summer's light and holiday cheer, August slowed, the calm drew near. We welcomed new elders with hearts aflame, Ordination, dedication – praise to God's name.

Though journeys from Norfolk still mark our days, We gather on Sundays, in worship and praise. Committees and meetings fill September's song, With activities returning, where all belong.

Linda brings kindness in visits of care, With tea (not too strong!) and stories to share. Simon is planning – Advent draws near, Christmas approaches, and a new year.

If questions of faith or theology rise, Send them along – let learning surprise. Our emails are open, our hearts just the same, Facebook proclaims the Church's glad name.

Eight thousand and more have seen what we do, A simple "like" shares good news with a view. So thank you, dear friends, for welcome so true, Together with Christ, we'll see His work through.

Linda is happy to do home pastoral visits when we are in Coventry so if you know someone who would appreciate a visit, please let her know. If you have a theological question you would like Simon to reflect on in Connections, please let him know. We are both contactable through our church email addresses (see Church Contacts on the back page).

If you would like to donate, the collecting box is on the table by the church entrance.

If you have a particular charity which you would like to be featured, please have a word with one of us. We will be featuring a new charity for November, December and January. Thank you

Women's Prayer Breakfast

Next dates: 11th October, 8th November, December: date & venue to be confirmed.

A warm welcome to all women from our Church, Belonging Church and any friends from another or no Church at all. We meet once a month at 8.30am to set up and start with a bring and share breakfast – always delicious and more than enough.

It is an opportunity to offer each other encouragement and a listening ear as we share good and tough times, laughter and maybe tears.

We spend about 20 minutes with an activity to nurture our spirit and soul, always ending in prayer for concerns shared. There is no obligation to speak, everything we share is confidential to those present.

Not everyone comes every time, just come when you can. We promise it is always worth getting up for.

Towards the Rising Sun - An Imaginary Journey Through Life

Many years ago in Kenya, in a village near to the town of Kisumu, which is on the Equator, lived a young man whose name, if translated into English, was Adam.

Adam was about 18 years of age; he was not a Christian, but he had heard of a man who had the same name as himself, who used to walk with God in the Garden of Eden. Adam wondered about this, and thought he would like to meet God, but where should he start in his quest to find him?

After much thought he decided to ask the village wise man if he knew where he might find God.

The wise man told Adam that to find God he must rise early in the morning and walk towards the rising sun. He said that he would be starting on a journey that would take many years to complete, and each morning he must walk towards the rising sun. On his journey he must do two things: first of all, he must observe and absorb the beauty around him. This should include all kinds of beauty; flowers, trees, birds, animals, mountains, rivers, seas; in fact, all manner of natural beauty. As well as this he should take note of all man-made beauty; music, art, the theatre, parks and landscaped gardens, to name but a few.

The other thing he must do was to be mindful of all the inequality and ugliness around him; of people who were being exploited by unscrupulous employers, people who had no clean air to breathe, or clean water to drink, not enough food to eat, and no proper housing, living in shacks made from cardboard, packing cases and all manner of oddments; or worse still, no shelter at all.

The wise man said that Adam must do whatever he was able, within the limit of his ability, to alleviate the ugliness and inequality he encountered on his journey.

So, Adam set off on his journey; as time went by, he passed through valleys, over mountains and all manner of beautiful countryside. He saw birds, animals, butterflies and all sorts of natural beauty. As well as these, he encountered beautiful music, art, parkland and much evidence of ways in which mankind had made the world a more beautiful place to live in.

At other times he saw ugliness, poverty, and people who lived in squalor, with no clean water to drink and not enough food to eat. When Adam encountered these situations, he did the best he could, within the limit of his ability, to alleviate them. Only when he had done all he could to help did Adam continue his journey.

All this took many years, and each morning Adam walked towards the rising sun.

Adam had had very little formal education, and had never been told that the world was round, and that if you kept going in the same direction for long enough you would arrive back where you started from.

Adam was amazed when one day he realised he was entering the village he had started his journey from. Immediately he went to find the wise man who had started him on his journey all those years ago.

By now the wise man was very old but he was overjoyed to see Adam and asked him all about his journey. He asked Adam what he had felt when he saw all the beauty in the world around him. Adam replied that he had felt uplifted and that life was a wonderful gift to be cherished.

The wise man smiled and asked how all the ugliness and poverty in the world had affected him. Adam replied that he had been very sad but had done all he could, within the limit of his ability, to alleviate these situations. The wise man then asked Adam how he felt when he had done all he could; Adam replied that although he still felt sad that he had not been able to do more, he had peace of mind knowing that he had done the best he could.

The wise man told Adam that he had learned a great lesson; in fact, he had spent his life doing the two things necessary to find a meaningful concept of God.

The wise man said to Adam that as we are all human beings we can only think of God in human terms, whereas in fact God was the life force present in the smallest atom as well as the furthest reaches of the universe.

Adam asked the question: if God is present in every atom in the universe, in all the beauty he had witnessed and all the inequality; was God good, as in the beauty he had witnessed, or evil as in all the inequality he had witnessed?

The wise man told Adam that we make God what we want him to be; it's how we use the God force inside us that is important, and we can use this for good or evil.

The wise man went on to tell Adam about a Jew called Jesus who had lived a long time ago and had preached love for everyone as the way to worship God. Jesus was so infused with love that the people who followed him called him the son of God.

The wise man said that the only way to make the world a better place for everyone was to spread the message of love, so that everyone could have the chance to appreciate the beauty of the world and rid the world of inequality. He went on to say that this would take many lifetimes to materialise, but that to make life worth living Adam must work towards it, remembering the two things he had been instructed to do when he had been walking towards the rising sun: absorb the beauty around him and try to make life better for those less fortunate than himself.

Adam spent the rest of his life trying to live up to this way of living. Eventually the wise man died, so Adam took over where he had left off.

Over the years many young people came to Adam asking where they could find God; he told them what the wise man had told him all those years ago – walk towards the rising sun.

NEWS IN BRIEF FROM AROUND THE UK AND BEYOND

When St Mary Magdalen Church in Chapelfields was built 90 years ago, it was the ambition to have a fresco painted but alas the congregation ran out of money. This year they employed Aidan Hart to design and paint a fresco which will be blessed and dedicated at noon on Saturday, 4th October 2025. The former Archbishop of Canterbury, Rowan Williams, has been invited to do this and preach. Yes, it is the church with the blue roof at Hearsall Lane.

Humans and most animals cannot repair a badly damaged eye and once lost, vision is usually gone. There is hope as it is found that the golden apple snail has the ability to regrow an entire eye. This freshwater species is being studied, especially as it has been discovered it shares many anatomical features with us humans.

At York Minster, digital scans of the life-sized statutes take place next year, to create an archive of their delicate stonework before repairs. The choir screen features 15 English monarchs from William the Conqueror to Henry VI.

The English cardinal John Henry Newman, who was made a saint in 2019, is to be elevated to a Director of the Church, the Pope has announced. He will become the 38th person to be recognised as such. Born in 1801, Cardinal Newman was a leading figure in the Oxford Movement, a campaign to revitalise Anglicanism by reinstating Catholic traditions.

Winchester Cathedral was ransacked in 1642 by Parliamentary solders who broke open tombs containing royal remains and threw bones at the windows. Afterwards these remains were returned to what were thought to be the correct resting places but that is in now doubt. There are 1,300 bones of 23 people, who could include William Rufus, Edward the Confessor and King Cnut. An application has been made to try to reinstate the bones into the correct tombs, using DNA testing.

Kiruna is in northern Sweden where 80% of Europe's iron ore is to be found and where the largest known deposit of rare earth minerals lies. The problem now is mining subsidence. A three-mile long, very wide road has been constructed to enable the 1912 austere wooden 600-tonne church to be loaded on a trailer and rolled to the new site, where there is a new town centre. It took two days to travel the three miles with over 10,000 visitors watching. The church was built close to the mine as a link to the mining community, with the lintel of its entrance built deliberately low, like a mine shaft. The Pastor advised that the idea from the beginning was that it would be a church that was for everyone, including the miners, "so that there would be a low threshold to enter". The cost of relocation has not been revealed by the mining company but is thought to be millions of kronor. The town of Kiruna is proud to show how cities can heal and believes the church is a symbol of what has been lost but also what can be saved.

Theological Reflections

There was an article in The Times on 19th August where President Trump was quoted as saying: "I want to try and get to Heaven if possible. I'm hearing I'm not doing well. I really hit the bottom of the totem pole. But if I can get to Heaven, this will be one of the reasons." The article was about the President's diplomatic efforts to end the war in Ukraine. Like my Reflections last month, this is not about a politician (whose views we may or may not agree with) but an individual whose comments raise some interesting questions.

President Trump's comments would indicate a theological understanding that entry to Heaven is gained by good works, that God judges individuals on their life's works and entry to Heaven is obtained if a certain standard is reached. The President would not be alone in thinking this as I have had numerous conversations with people who think they have "lived an 'ok' life" and that God will accept this. This is not a new discussion, Augustine and Pelagius argued over this issue in the 4th century. McGrath* says that Martin Luther struggled with it from a different angle – he could not understand how his works would please a righteous God.

This month I want to reflect on how we can get to Heaven. For now, I am defining 'Heaven' as the place where God dwells and believers will dwell with him after death for eternity; perhaps another month, I will consider this in more detail. The simple answer about entering Heaven, is through faith in Jesus. Nevertheless, even if we have faith in Jesus, do we still not need works to enable us to get a 'bigger mansion'? Jesus told Thomas that he was "the way and the truth and the life. No one comes to the Father except through" him [John 14:6]. In the Old Testament the Israelites had to obey God's commandments and there were various sacrifices made for forgiveness, when they fell short of God's requirements. Jesus spoke often about the Kingdom of Heaven, both on earth and above. He told the disciples to rejoice "that your names are written in Heaven" [Luke 10:20], they would receive their reward there [Matthew. 5:12] and if they acknowledged him now, he would acknowledge them before the Father [Matthew 10:32].

However, the clearest evidence that works will not get us into Heaven is seen at the crucifixion, where Jesus has the conversation with the thief on the cross [Luke 24:32-43]. If works are part of the entry standards for Heaven, then the criminal would fail at the first hurdle. He acknowledged his criminality [v.4] before Jesus, but also recognises Jesus was different. He asks Jesus to remember him when he comes into his kingdom. Jesus replied, "today you will be with me in Paradise."

If it is as simple as that, why do not more people believe? Perhaps the Church has made it seem more complicated with all the theological debates around the nature of salvation. If works are not important, then why do we need to live a good life?

Surely, we can believe in Jesus and then get on with enjoying life. Paul addresses this question in Romans 3 and points out that all will be held accountable for their actions (see also Romans 14:12, Hebrews 4:13, 1 Peter 4:5). Revelations describes a Judgement Day when all were "judged according to what they had done" [Rev. 20:12] and entry to Heaven was only granted to those whose names were "written in the Book of Life".

Perhaps President Trump is half-right with his comment about works being important, as Jesus does call us to be his disciples and witnesses, so works are relevant but only if we put our faith in Jesus first. This is the most important part: if we have faith in Jesus and follow him, then our future in Heaven is guaranteed. As Paul told the Phillipi jailer: "Believe in the Lord Jesus, and you will be saved" [Acts 16:31].

Warwick Road Centre and Café - October Update

A few building and maintenance issues to report this month.

An old saying comes to mind: "You don't see a bus for a while and then two come along at once." We've had great service from our washing machine and refrigerator at Warwick Road Centre for many years, then they both go wrong in the space of three weeks. We had to buy a new washing machine – great customer service from John Lewis. Then an expensive repair to the large kitchen refrigerator, carried out by local firm RHE Catering Equipment Services who have given us good service many times. Fingers crossed both will now go on for a few more years.

The sale process of the church continues and meanwhile we continue to be responsible for maintenance and building issues.

We have just had the annual service of the church gas boiler, and all appears to be working well. We have had major expenditure over the last three years, almost rebuilding the boiler. In addition to the boiler service, Daly Engineering carried out a 'chemical flush-through' of all church heating pipework to improve how the heating reaches more remote parts of the church like upstairs in the balcony.

Also, FixFire carried out statutory fire safety work in the church; Mosaic Church agreed to pay 50% of the invoice, amounting to almost £1,800.

WORDSEARCH

To St Luke, whose feast-day is 18th October, we owe a beautifully written gospel as well as the Book of Acts. He was a Greek physician and faithful travelling companion to St Paul. Under house arrest near the end of his life Paul noted, 'only Luke is with me'. Luke's gospel focuses on the compassion of Christ, and offers us moving parables, such as the Good Samaritan and Prodigal Son. Women figure more prominently in Luke's gospel than in any other: look out for the extended story of the Virgin Birth, and stories of Mary, Elizabeth, and the woman who was a sinner. His gospel also features more poor people, more lepers, more 'sinners', who are all shown to be 'inside' the love of Christ. In Acts, Luke skilfully links sacred and profane history, as subsequent archaeology has shown. He tells of how the early Christians moved away from Jerusalem into the pagan world, and especially on to Rome.
